TIDBIT: Making the Most of your College Investment

How can you decide on a major before you even apply to schools?

Start to research fields that seem interesting to you. Conduct personal information interviews with your parents and friends' parents to find out what their jobs are like. Ask questions about daily tasks, the work environment, and the skills needed to perform the job. If possible, shadow someone for the day to see whether you might enjoy the work. Offer to volunteer your time for some hands-on experience and a more in-depth view of the job.—NextStepU.com
